1. Between 24 March and 19 April 1951, Stralsund-Parow airfield was still occupied by naval police. The guard detail at the field was increased. Eight watchtowers, each permanently occupied by two sentries, were erected. A fence two meters high bordered the northern, western, and southern edges of the field. The beach, on the eastern edge, was patrolled with police dogs. The fence and the beach were illuminated at night. *
2. Because of patrols, observations could only be made from a distance. Construction work was being done on the landing field. Just north of the former runway there was a long two-story brick building with two high smokestacks. The building was apparently not being used. Two large permanent garages were next to the five barracks buildings on the southern edge of the field. Three large temporary wooden buildings were constructed between the barracks installations and the landing field. The former German officers' mess was reconditioned. **

25X1A

Comment. The occupation by naval police was previously reported.

25X1A [REDACTED] It is not believed that air units are stationed in Parow.

25X1A * Comment. The purpose of the construction work at the field is not known. Aviation Volkspolizei are allegedly scheduled to be stationed at the field. [REDACTED]
